With all the racial tensions going on these days and nothing but bad news, we've got some good news. "Toques In Black, A Celebration of Black Chefs" is a cookbook with recipes and stories about growing up and the successes that have come from what at times seemed like insurmountable odds. With photos by the award-winning photographer Battman, this is a book to get excited about and will be an inspiration to young people of every color.

Sales of the book will help fund The Chef's Connection Line Cook Program, a free training and placement program to get people jobs in restaurants; the majority of the participants are unemployed Black and Hispanic.
